PREFACE.

Fifteen years ago I began to search for the descendants of my father's eldest uncle—James McClung. I searched eight years and a half before I succeeded in finding them. While searching for these, however, I discovered several hundred other McClungs, of whom I had never heard before. At first I had no thought of publishing the results of my research, but as time passed and the genealogical data began to accumulate, the necessity for preserving it in a more permanent form and giving it a wider circulation became apparent.

The record will be found to lack uniformity, owing to the fact that my system of registration was not complete when the work began, but developed as the work proceeded. The record begins with the earliest known ancestor and traces the descendants of his eldest son down to date, then traces the descendants of the second son and then the third, and so on to the youngest.

Two numbers, separated by a hyphen, precede each name. The first number represents the number of the child in the family. The second number represents the generation to which he belongs. The volume contains a record of nine generations, including the names of about 3,500 McClungs, exclusive of those who have acquired the name by marriage into the family.

The length of the biographical sketches does not represent the relative merit of the individuals. Many who deserve extensive mention do not receive it because either they or their kindred have neglected my repeated requests for information concerning them. No attempt has been made either to flatter or to slander any one.

The names of the various branches are chosen arbitrarily. They are neither inclusive nor exclusive. For example, the Pittsburgh branch does not include all the McClungs who live in Pittsburgh. On the other hand, some who belong to the Pittsburgh branch do not live in Pittsburgh or even in the State of Pennsylvania. Again, the Texas branch constitutes but a very small proportion of those bearing the name McClung who live in Texas.

It is quite probable that the South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Texas branches are closely related. It is also probable that the Toronto, Buffalo, Canada, Michigan and Erie branches are related. However, in the absence of positive proof of their relationship, they are classified under separate heads.

Abbreviations: b.—born; d.—died; m.—married; dau.—daughter; wid.—widow. Other abbreviations are only such as are in common use.

Let us now indicate the method of tracing a lineage according to the system used in this volume. On page 57, line 42, you will find the name Thelma McClung. Her number is 1-9, which indicates that she is the first child in her father's family and that she belongs to the 9th generation. To find the name of her father, trace backward to the first person previously recorded belonging to the 8th generation. This we find three lines above to be 1-8 Hugh Mitchell McClung. To find her grandfather, trace back to the first person of the 7th generation. This we find on the same page to be 1-7 James Cowan McClung. To find her great-grandfather, trace back to the first person belonging to the 6th generation. This we find to be 5-6 James Harvey McClung, recorded on page 57, line 23. To find her great-great-grandfather, trace back to the first person belonging to the 5th generation. This we find to be 2-5 Patrick McClung, recorded on page 54, line 9. To find her great-great-great-grandfather, trace back to the first person of the 4th generation. This we find to be 6-4 William McClung, recorded on page 47, line 41. Her next earlier ancestor is 7-3 James McClung, page 43, line 37. Her next earlier ancestor is 2-2 William McClung, page 18, line 29. Her next earlier ancestor is 1-1 James McClung, page 9, line 1.

Great care has been taken to make the record accurate; nevertheless a number of errors have been discovered. Doubtless many more will yet be discovered. Where quotations contain errors in spelling, the errors are quoted intentionally. Friends will confer a favor upon the author if they will kindly inform him of any errors they may discover.

I offer to serve as repositor of future records of the family. I acknowledge my obligation to all who have furnished me with genealogical data for this record.

To Mr. Horace A. McClung, the proprietor of the McClung Printing Company, of Pittsburgh, through whose generous co-operation the publication of this volume was made possible. I tender my gratitude.

WILLIAM McCLUNG.

Philadelphia, Pa., September 1, 1904.

INTRODUCTION.

The McClung family is of Scotch-Irish descent. The history of this race begins in the time of Agricola, the Roman general, who, when he had conquered all the present territory of England and carried his victorious banners north to the Grampian hills of Scotland, found there a foe who could effectually resist his further advance, and compel him to acknowledge them an unconquered and unconquerable race.

Their early glory came in the days of Wallace and Bruce, when they won their independence from the English Crown. Their highest ideal of freedom was realized in the days of John Knox, when they bid defiance to tyrants and vindicated their belief that Kings and Queens were amenable to law, and could not enslave and oppress their subjects with impunity.

The Scotch-Irishman is of composite race whose basis is the Romanized Briton, from whence he gets his Celtic blood. Occasional intermarriages with the Picts, Angles, Danes and Norse, introduced a tinge of Saxon and Teutonic blood. At a later date the race was slightly modified by the Norman invasion. Long before the emigration to Ireland began, these racial characteristics had thoroughly blended in one composite whole, which formed the racial basis for the Scotch-Irish-American of the present day.

Some have made the grievous mistake of supposing the term Scotch-Irish to mean the blending of the Scotch and Irish races. As a matter of fact no such blending of these races has ever occurred to any great extent, at least in modern times. Mutual antipathies resulting from conflicting religious beliefs served as an effective barrier against such a racial amalgamation. The native Irish are zealous Roman Catholics. The Scotch are equally zealous Protestants. It was on account of religious intolerance and persecution that the latter left their bonny heath. How could anyone suppose that they could so soon forget their former woes and wed the very cause of their complaints? The term Scotch-Irish implies the temporary residence of a Scotchman in the Emerald Isle. The true Scotch-Irish have not a drop of Irish blood flowing in their veins. They are pure, unadulterated Scotch. This, then, is the race from whence our fathers sprung. The memory of their heroic faith and deeds is our immortal legacy. Their deeds have been recorded by the wizard pen of Scott; their joys and sorrows sung by "Bobby Burns."

RACIAL CHARACTERISTICS.

It is deemed appropriate to here enumerate some of the qualities that especially characterize the Scotch-Irish. They are preeminently a liberty-loving race. The sense of equity and fairness is in them developed to a remarkable degree; and when this sense is horrified by evidences of ruthless oppression, they instinctively throw down the challenge to the oppressor.

Their love of liberty is attested by the blood of Scotsmen shed on more than two hundred battlefields. In America, the Scotch-Irish were the first to raise the cry for American Independence; and when the crisis came they were among the first to shoulder the musket and rally to the standard of the patriots. Howe, in his Historical Collections, says of the Scotch-Irish of the Valley of Virginia: "They were among the bravest and most effective militia when called into the field. General Washington signified his opinion of them when in the darkest day of the Revolutionary struggle, he expressed his confidence that if all other resources should fail, he might yet repair with a single standard to West Augusta and there rally a band of patriots who could meet the enemy at the Blue Ridge and there establish the boundary of a free empire in the west. This saying of the father of his country has been variously reported; but we have no reason to doubt that he did in some form declare his belief that in the last resort, he could yet gather a force in western Virginia which the victorious armies of Great Britain could not subdue. The spirit of these sires still reigns in their descendants as the day of trial, come when it may, will prove."

Another characteristic is their boldness and love of adventure. King James recognized this quality in the Scotch when he sought to reestablish the depopulated province of Ulster at the close of the Tyrone Rebellion. This adventurous spirit descended from sire to son and had not a little to do with their emigration to this land and their wresting it from the hand of the savage. By their pioneer settlements along the Shenandoah Valley, the Scotch-Irish formed an impregnable barrier between the Cavalier of tidewater Virginia and the Indian savage of the Trans-Alleghenies.

Another characteristic is their love of learning. Wherever the Scotch-Irish went they planted their classical schools—"little log colleges"—which formed the nucleus of our Seminaries and Universities of the present day.

The final characteristic of the Scotch-Irish is their love of religion and the home. No sooner had they erected in the new settlements a shelter for the protection of their wives and children, than they erected a house for the worship of God. Wherever this love of religion and the home prevails there of necessity will be found manly virtue, noble integrity and good citizenship.

The McClung family has to a good degree possessed these predominant characteristics of the race. Their names are to be found on the muster rolls of every war in the history of the nation; a larger list on the registers of our higher educational institutions; a far greater list on the registers of our churches; and it is to be confidently hoped a goodly company are registered in the Lamb's Book of Life.

EARLIEST RECORDS AND TRADITIONS.

The earliest known record of the McClung family locates them in Galloway, Scotland. The name clearly indicates their Highland Scotch origin. Tradition says that three McClung brothers named James, John and Robert, left Scotland on account of religious persecution and settled in the province of Ulster, Ireland about 1690. They were Presbyterians of the "true blue" type.

They are believed to have first settled in Larne, County Antrim, Ireland. Later some of the family lived in the same county near Coleraine.

Miss Mary Semple, of Mt. Hill, Larne, Ireland, says: "Hugh Houston, about the time of the persecution, fled from Greenock (others say Wigtonshire) in Scotland to Larne, County Antrim, Ireland. His son Samuel married Margaret McClung. The McClungs belonged to Larne, but it is quite recently I heard of them, as it is more than sixty years since the last of the family removed to Belfast. Many of them removed to America."

The first to emigrate to America, so far as known, was Thomas, who came from Moate in County West Meath, Ireland and settled first near Christiana, Pa., in 1729. About the year 1731, John McClung landed at Boston with an aunt and settled in Brookfield, Mass. In 1734, he left Brookfield and went to Lancaster County, Pa. He was joined there by his father and the rest of the family about the year 1740. The reunited family consisted of the father, whose name was James; the mother whose name is unknown, and eight children some of whom were married and had families of their own. The names of the eight are as follows: 1 James, 2 William, 3 Hugh, 4 Charles, 5 Matthew, 6 Mary, 7 Isabel and 8 John. These all settled for a while in Lancaster County, Pa. About 1742, 1 James, 2 William, and 3 Hugh emigrated to the "Borden Grant" in Augusta (now Rockbridge) County, Virginia. 3 Charles, 4 Matthew, 5 Mary and 6 Isabel, remained in Lancaster County or vicinity; while John, a little later settled in the Susquehanna Valley in Buffalo township, Northumberland County, Pa. From there his descendants went east, north and west.

Other emigrations of McClungs from Ireland occurred at various times until within the past ten or twelve years. They are doubtless all descendants of one of the three original brothers. According to the official census of Ireland in 1890, there yet remained about 313 McClungs in Ireland at that date, and all in the province of Ulster.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME.

Oft repeated efforts to ascertain the origin of the name McClung, have been futile. That subject still remains a matter of conjecture. If, as some suppose, it has the same origin as the name McClean, then the McClungs may trace their lineage back to Gillean or Macgilean, who dwelt in Lorn, fought in the battle of Largs, and whose name signifies a servant of St. John; Mac, the Celtic prefix meaning son of; Gille meaning servant; "an" a contraction of iohan meaning John the Saint; hence a son of the servant of St. John.

There is greater probability, however, that the original name was Lang, (in Scotch meaning long) or that it was simply Lung; the Celtic prefix Mac abbreviated to Mc and a doubling of the "c" resulting in the present form.

The name MacClung appears in a list of names collected by Lord Stair and published in Patronymica Britannica under the title of "Seven Hundred Specimens of Celtic Aristocracy" or "Almacks Extraordinary."

JAMES McCLUNG'S ENCOUNTER WITH THE INDIANS

1-1 JAMES MCCLUNG,

b. in Scotland. Emigrated from Scotland to Ireland, and from thence to Pennsylvania, U. S. A., about 1740. He died about 1744; landed with his family at Philadelphia, Pa., and is thought to have settled in Lancaster, County, Pa. The name of his wife is unknown. Eight children viz.: 1 James, 2 William, 3 Hugh, 4 Charles, 5 Matthew, 6 Mary, 7 Isabel and 8 John.

1-2 JAMES MCCLUNG, b. probably in Ireland; d. between 1779 and 1785, in Rockbridge Co., Va. Emigrated from Ireland to Pennsylvania about 1740; thence to Rockbridge Co., Va., with his brothers, William and Hugh, about 1742. He is thought to have married Mary McKy. The following quotation from a newspaper clipping may be of interest:

"John McKy had but few relatives. The McClungs were his nephews. Some say he gave them a tract of land; others, that they gave him a little gray mare in turn. It is said when James McClung married a girl who had gone out to service, (they called her a serving girl) that old Grandfather said: 'O never mind, wives are hard to get;' which shows some were somewhat clannish. John McKy died in 1773. Henry McClung and William McClung were two of the appraisers of his estate."

He is believed to be the James McClung, Sr., who in 1753, signed a call to the Rev. John Brown to become pastor of Timber Ridge Presbyterian church in Augusta (now Rockbridge) Co., Va. See Foote's Sketches of Virginia, pages 96-98. He is also supposed to be the James McClung whose will is recorded at Lexington, Va., in Will Book No. 1, and is as follows:

"In the name of God Amen: this second day of October Anno Dom. One thousand seven Hundred and Seventy nine I James McClung, of Rockbridge County & commonwealth of Virginia being sick & weak in Body but of sound & disposing memory & calling to mind the Mortality of my Body and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament.

2-2 WILLIAM McCLUNG; b. probably in County Antrim, Ireland. Emigrated from Ireland to America about 1740. He landed at Philadelphia and settled for a while in Lancaster Co., Pa. About 1742 he emigrated with his brothers James and Hugh to Augusta (now Rockbridge) Co. Va. He settled in the "Borden Grant," near Timber Ridge. The deed to his land is on record at Staunton, Va., and was made by Benj. Borden, Jr., for 314 acres, three rood and 25 polls. Price paid, £9, seven shillings. The deed is dated Mar. 19, 1746. It states, however, that the land was sold to William McClung by Benj. Borden, Sr. As Benj. Borden, Sr., died in 1742, this fixes the date of Wiliam McClung's emigration to Virginia as not later than 1742, unless perchance the purchase was made before leaving Pennsylvania.

He signed a call for the pastoral services of Rev. John Brown at Timber Ridge Presbyterian Church in 1753, and subscribed to his salary in 1754-1755. "Widow" McClung is evidently a misreading of "William." See Foote's Sketches of Virginia. He was on the first bench of elders in Timber Ridge church along with Archibald, Alexander and others, during Rev. John Brown's pastorate.

William Henry Ruffner, in Historical Papers of Washington and Lee University, says of him: "The family of William McClung was an important one, and touched the college at many points. Mr. McClung was married twice, and his family was large and became well connected. His daughter Susan, married a son of Robert Alexander, who is now listed as the first rector of Washington and Lee University. Another daughter married Col. Samuel McDowell. He was the brother of Col. James McDowell, who was the father of Gov. James McDowell, both of whom were trustees."

The following is a copy of William McClung's will, which is on record at Lexington, Va., in Will Book No. 1.

"In the name of God, Amen; the 20th day of Sept. 1783. I William McClung of Rockbridge County being of sound and disposing memory and caling to mind the mortality of my body, knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament in manner following: and first I recommend my soul to God who gave it and my body to the dust to be decently interred at the discretion of my Executors. I order and it is my will that all my just debts and funeral charges be paid by my Executors. I give and bequeath to my son-in-law Samuel Lyle one bond on Robert Taylor and Thomas Steel for £16. 8. to him and his heirs.

I give and bequeath to my Grandson Thomas McClung the plantation whereon I formerly lived containing two hundred and nineteen acres to him and his heirs forever, also his maintainance and schooling to be paid out of my personal estate and if my said Grandson Thomas McClung should die in non-age the said land to be equally divided betwixt my two sons James and John McClung by a line running directly across said tract. The west End with the buildings and orchards to be my son James's part and the other my son John's Part to them and their heirs forever. I order that my land be cropped or rented by my Executors till my said Grandson shall attain to Lawful age and applyed as my Personal Estate.

Lastly I do hereby constitute and appoint my two sons James and John McClung and my Grandson William Lyle Executors of this my last Will and Testament also Guardians of my Grandson Thomas McClung and I do hereby revoke and disanull all former and other Will or Wills by me in anywise heretofore made, ratifying and confirming this my Last

Will and Testament I. witness Whereof I have hereunto Set my hand and seal the day and year above written.

At a court held for Rockbridge County 4th May 1784."

William McClung was twice married. The names of his wives are unknown. It is believed that he married both wives in Ireland. The order of the ages of their children is unknown. It is also unknown which are children of the first wife, and which of the second. It is said that Elizabeth and Mary were sisters; that Sarah was a half sister of John, and that John was a half brother of James. Nine children, viz.:

1-3 Elizabeth McClung; b. 1724; d. Mar. 3, 1773; m. about 1746 in Rockbridge Co., Va., Thomas Paxton; b. 1719, in Ireland; d. Sep. 27, 1788. For their history see the Paxton and Marshall Family Genealogies, by William McClung Paxton, of Platte City, Mo.

2-3 Charles McClung; b. in Ireland; d. 1762, in Lancaster Co., Pa.; presumably unmarried, as he divided his lands and other property to James, Matthew and Charles—the young sons of his brother Matthew, and to his brother John. In 1752, Daniel Ferree, of Lancaster Co., Pa., conveyed to Charles and his brother Matthew, jointly, 308 acres of land.

1-4 Thomas McClung; d. The names of his parents are unknown. He inherited a plantation from his grandfather, William McClung. He was a minor in 1783. See will, page —. He married Mary ——. In 1800 they sold a farm specified as the one which he inherited from his grandfather. He sold Mar. 26, 1800, to William Caruthers, 75 acres; Apr. 1, 1800, to Joseph McClung, 83½ acres; June 4, 1805, to John Donnell, lot No. 34 in Fairfield, Va.; and Sep. 30, 1805, to Alex. Moore, 138 acres for $1,456.00. In some of the deeds his wife is called Mary; in others, Polly. Nothing further is known of them.

3-3 Matthew McClung; b. probably in County Antrim, Ireland; d. 1802, in Upper Leacock Township, Lancaster Co., Pa.; m. Martha Cunningham, niece (sister's daughter) of James Campbell, who owned the land on which Lexington, Va., was laid out. Matthew resided on Pequea Creek, near the present village of Leaman Place, Pa., about ten miles

Charles McClung emigrated from Lancaster Co., Pa., to Knoxville, Tenn., in 1788. Possessing only the rudiments of an English education and such a knowledge of surveying as he had acquired by six weeks study, he was employed by Gen. James White to survey the original site for the city of Knoxville. Soon after his arrival in Tennessee, he took rank with the first men of the territory. In 1792 he was appointed Clerk of the County Court of Knox Co., which office he filled for a number of years to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. He was an active and influential member of the convention which formed the constitution of the State. In addition to his other labors, he followed surveying; and most of his fortune was made by speculations in real estate. He was a man of fine personal appearance; six feet high, weighing 160 pounds; erect and energetic in his movements. He possessed a systematic, comprehensive and discriminating mind, with a good judgment of men and a refined sense of honor. He was liberal, kind and generous. In 1810, having acquired a handsome competency, he retired from the activities of business life, to his farm ten miles west of Knoxville, where he indulged his taste for literary and other congenial pursuits. He bequeathed to his descendants an unsullied reputation. See portrait. Nine children, viz.:

- 7-3 James McClung, b. probably in County Antrim, near Coleraine, Ireland; d. near Fairfield, Rockbridge Co., Va., 1798. Emigrated from Ireland 1740. Landed at Philadelphia. Lived about two years in Lancaster Co., Pa. Emigrated in 1742 to the "Borden Grant" in Augusta (now Rockbridge) Co., Va., and settled on a farm on the east bank of South River, three miles east of Fairfield. He erected his home in a narrow glen between the river and the mountain and about midway between the Little Mary and Big Mary Creeks. The original house was burned; but his neighbors assembled and built another for him and had it ready for occupancy within a week. This building is still standing, after the elapse of more than a century. This residence will be referred to hereafter as "Mary Glen."

Two reasons have been assigned for his having selected this location instead of the level and more open portions out in the valley. First, because of its proximity to the mountain, where the grazing was fine and where game was abundant. Second, the chance of greater immunity from the incursion of Indians.

The following well-authenticated story is told of James McClung: Soon after his emigration to Virginia, while in the timber making rails with which to fence his farm, he was attacked by five savage Indians, who proposed to relieve him of his scalp. He asked permission to finish splitting his log before being scalped. His request was granted. Under the circumstances he found the log very difficult to split. He asked the Indians to assist him. Thinking they should have his scalp all the sooner, they consented. He placed them on opposite sides of the log, with their fingers in the split, giving them orders to pull with all their might while he should drive in the wedge. Then with a desperate stroke he knocked out the wedge, causing the log to close upon their fingers, thus holding them fast while he, amidst their shrieks and curses, dispatched them with his axe.

Since this tragic incident has been attributed to Daniel Boone and others, the sources of this information will here be given. The first is Mr. John H. Denison, the owner of the farm where the episode occurred. He asserts that he was raised an orphan boy in the home of James McClung's grand-son, James Gardner McClung, and that the said James Gardner often talked of the event and attributed it to his own grandfather. The second is Miss Susan Hite, still living at the age of nearly 78 years. She asserts that she was born and reared in the immediate neighborhood of the McClungs; that she has often heard the incident related, and that she never heard it attributed to any other than James McClung. She likewise had often seen the Indian graves on the original McClung farm.

The third is Mrs. Hettie McClung Hanna, who was born and reared within two miles of where the scene occurred. She asserts she has always understood it was a McClung who did the killing, but can not say which one of them it was. The fourth is Phebe McClung, a grand-daughter of James McClung. She lived about eighty-five years; and a short while before her death, told the writer personally that it was her own grandfather who killed the Indians. They were buried near the place where they were killed; namely, on the second level above the "Cold Spring," which flows into Little Mary's Creek, three miles east of Fairfield, Va.

James McClung was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and for his services received grants of land in Kanawha Co., Va. (now West Virginia), and in Kentucky.

His will is on record in Lexington, Va., and is as follows:

"In the name of God, Amen: This twenty-fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, I, James McClung, of Rockbridge County and State of Virginia, being in a sick and frail state of body but of sound mind and memory, do make and ordain this, my last will and testament, in the manner and form following:

First, I order all my lawful debts and funeral expenses to be paid.

Second, I give and bequeath to my dearly beloved wife Ann a horse and saddle, a bed and furniture, and to have a decent maintainance provided for her by my son James during her natural life.

Thirdly, I give and bequeath to my daughter Rebecca, a horse and saddle, also one hundred acres of land, being part of a tract of one thousand acres in the State of Kentucky, provided she live single or to her heirs of her own body, if she marries, to them and their assigns forever, otherwise I appoint that at her death the said land shall go to my son William and his heirs forever.

Fourthly, I give and bequeath to my daughter Elizabeth one hundred acres of said above mentioned Kentucky land, provided she hath heirs of her own body, otherwise I order that said hundred acres shall also go to be the property of my son William or his heirs and assigns forever.

Fifthly, I give and bequeath to my son Samuel six hundred acres of land, either of the above mentioned survey in Kentucky or out of a tract of land in Virginia, Canaway (Kanawha) County, Peter's Creek, such choice to be to him, his heirs and assigns forever; also I bequeath to him a horse and saddle and a decent suit of Cloaths.

Sixthly, I give and bequeath to my son James the tract of land I now dwell on, with all its appurtenances and all lands I hold in this county of Rockbridge and elsewhere, except what is above mentioned or bequeathed to him, his heirs and assigns forever; also all my movable estate and stock of every kind, likewise a negro girl named Phillis.

And do make and ordain my said son James sole executor of this my last will and testament, and do hereby revoke and disannul all other wills, legacies or executors by me heretofore named, willed or bequeathed, ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and seal the day and year above written. Signed, sealed, published, pronounced and declared in presents of

JAMES McCLUNG, (Seal.)

JOHN LYLE, SR.,
JAMES McCRORY,
WILLIAM PATTON,
JOHN McCLUNG.

This will was probated Oct. 2, 1798, by James McClung, mentioned therein and attested by John Lyle and William Patton.

James McClung, m. Ann Gray. Fourteen children, viz.:

1-4 Nancy (Agnes G.) McClung, b. Dec. 25, 1752; d. Mar. 8, 1833 (Nancy is often called Agnes. The 'G.' is believed to stand for Gray, the maiden name of her mother); m.

1-6 James Trice Patton, b. July 20, 1826; d. May 12, 1891. He received a liberal education. Was at Washington College in 1844-45. After leaving college he studied law with Governor Letcher. Obtaining license, he began the practice of law in Lexington, Va., and in connection with his practice, for some years edited the Lexington Gazette. He became associate editor of the Richmond Whig in 1853. A short time before the Civil War he purchased the Parkersburg Gazette. He also edited a paper in Wheeling, W. Va., before going to Parkersburg.

In 1870-71 he was member of the Virginia House of Delegates. He was elected Judge of the County Court of Rockbridge; went upon the bench in March, 1880, and served a full term of six years. In this position he presided with dignity and ability. The latter part of his life he spent in literary pursuits. m. 1859, Agnes M. Barclay, dau. of Col. A. T. Barclay, of Lexington, Va.

Judge Patton was a fluent and agreeable writer. His "Old Men of Rockbridge," contributed to the Lexington Gazette, showed an intimate knowledge of the county's history, and preserved in an interesting form much interesting and valuable history of the old families of Rockbridge County. Seven children, viz.:

1-5 William Patton, of Dayton, Ohio.

3-4 (A dau.) McClung, m. Andrew Reid. They resided at "Mulberry Hill," one mile below Lexington, Va. They owned a fine home and lived in luxury. "One negro did nothing but care for the roses." "Silk window curtains hung down to the floor."

4-4 (A dau.) McClung, m. Mr. Trotter.

5-4 Mary McClung, m. Mr. Hamilton. They lived in Indiana.

6-4 William McClung, b. probably at "Mary Glen," three miles east of Fairfield, Rockbridge Co., Va., 1761-2; d. at his residence one mile east of Greenback, Loudon Co., Tenn., Feb. 14, 1837, "in his seventy-sixth year." He probably received his education at Liberty Hall Academy, now Washington and Lee University. He was a teamster in Washington's Army during the Revolutionary War. The following incident is told of his army experiences: On a certain occasion he was driving an army wagon containing some empty barrels. The road being very rough, the barrels made a rumbling noise. The British army, encamped not far away, heard the noise and, supposing it to be the drums of the American troops, called for a line of battle and made ready for a fight.

He emigrated from Rockbridge Co., Va., to Wilkes Co., Ga., May 15, 1787. He was a farmer.

The following church certificate was given him by the session of the Presbyterian church at Timber Ridge, Rockbridge Co., Va.:

"That the bearer, William McClung, was a single young man when he left this society the 15th of May, 1787, and from his childhood behaved without blame or reproach, was admitted to full communion with the church and left us free from any imputation that would expose him to public shame or the censures of the church, is certified at Timber Ridge Sept. 2nd, 1788. By

JOHN LYLE,
WM. WALKER,
JOHN McCLUNG,
Elders."

He m. in Green Co., Ga., Nov. 12, 1789, Euphemia Cunningham, b. Feb. 9, 1769; d. Jan. 28, 1843, dau. of Patrick Cunningham, who is said to have been a wealthy cotton planter. The following pen-picture of Euphemia is given by her grand-daughter: "Height about 5 ft. 2 inches; weight about 130 lbs.; hair dark auburn; eyes light brown; nose slightly prominent; complexion fair, fresh and healthful; not prematurely aged in appearance. She was an exceedingly neat and cleanly housekeeper." The following church certificate was given William McClung upon his departure from Wilkes Co., Ga.:

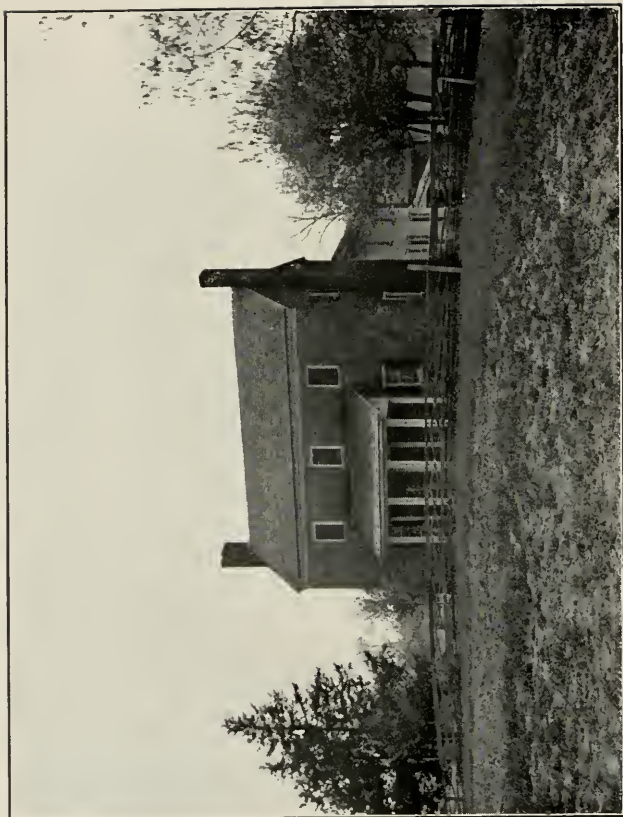

"Smyrna, Ga., Jan. 13, 1806.

"That the bearer, William McClung, an Elder, and Euphemia, his wife, have lived in this congregation a number of years past and behaved in a sober, Christian manner—are in the communion of the church and leave us with unimpeachable character, is certified by the pastor,

FRAS. CUMMINS.

"Pr. order of Session."

William McClung owned a farm of 391 acres in Wilkes Co., Ga., on Upton's Creek. He also owned a farm of 213 acres in Green Co., Ga., on Richland Creek. About the year 1806 he emigrated with his family to Blount Co., East Tennessee, and lived for one year on the Houston farm, on Nine Mile Creek, eight miles southwest of Maryville, Tenn. The next year he entered a 300-acre farm on Baker's Creek, Blount (now Loudon) County, adjoining the present village of Greenback, Tenn. Here, about the year 1810, he built a large brick house, in which he dwelt the remainder of his life. He was an Elder in the Baker's Creek Presbyterian church for probably thirty years.

The following pen-picture of him was furnished by William Craig, who knew him intimately for twenty-five years:

"William McClung was tall, slender, raw-boned, about six feet high; slightly stooped in his old age. In his prime he stood erect. He had rather narrow shoulders; head medium size; hair gray and medium length; beard heavy; upper lip clean shaven, according to the custom in his day; eye-brows rather heavy; nose medium size; cheek bones prominent; eyes, dark gray, sharp and piercing; face lean. He was a raw-boned man. He was a man of good sense, lively, and full of fun; joking with the neighbors, and servants in his employ. He was a very religious man."

He seems to have been a man of fair education. The only civil office he ever held so far as known was that of Justice of the Peace. His will is as follows:

I Wm McClung of Blount County and state of Tennessee do make this my last will and Testament in maner following that is to say

1st that all my just debts be fully paid

2nd After the discharge of my funeral expences that my Beloved wife Euphemia McClung be and remain in full possession of all my Estate both real and personal that is in Blount County during her natural life and after her decease I give and bequeath to my Children herein after named in manner following

14-4 Capt. James McClung, b. about 1777; d. "before the Civil War, aged 83 years." He was buried in Mt. Carmel cemetery near Vesuvius, Va. He was a captain of militia. The following sketch of him was written by Judge James Trice Patton, and published in the Lexington, Va. Gazette, May 16, 1873.

"It shall be my province now to treat of a man in a rather different sphere of life from those heretofore mentioned—of one whose name is not familiar to those bearing it in remembrance, either as a politician, legislator, justice of the peace, practical farmer, nor in any special capacity for which those hitherto treated of have been noted; but mainly in the character of an active devout Christian. Capt. James McClung was a man especially remarkable in that respect. As an evidence of that fact you may mention his name to anyone who now retains a knowledge of him and the first idea that would arise in connection with that recollection would be that of his Christian character; or let those testify who have been accustomed to hear his memory referred to, and I venture the prediction it would be that their knowledge of him was from hearing him spoken of as peculiarly a Christian man. The birthplace of Capt. McClung was on the east bank of South River a few miles in an east of south direction from the town of Fairfield, where an inviting plot of ground between the river and the mountain was selected by one of the first settlers of his name in the Valley. Land with a good strong soil, but steep in places, plenty of timber and delightful springs of cool, delicious water. There were until very recently other lands in that vicinity belonging to different branches of the same family and in whose hands they had been retained from the earliest settlement of the county.

The residence of Capt. McClung's father was at the mouth of the "Little Mary" where a log house after the primitive style of buildings among the early settlers was erected, but scarcely a vestige now remains to mark the spot. It is a rather narrow strip of land between the river and the mountain side of the well-known Diggs Survey, famous for its mineral deposits. In the course of the family inheritance this tract of land passed from James McClung the first, to James McClung of whom I write, and about half of it is still owned by the present James McClung living thereon, having been owned by one of that name since its first settlement. The residence of Capt. James McClung, the subject of this sketch, was on that portion of the tract higher up the river where he spent the years of his life after his marriage. He was the youngest of fourteen children, and like most of the descendants of the first settlers, was of Scotch-Irish stock of the true blue Presbyterian stamp, and from my earliest knowledge of him was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church. He was a constant attendant at the house of God, and so zealous was he in that observance that he has been known to walk from his home, a distance of twenty miles to attend a meeting of Presbytery at Staunton. I once heard a venerable gentleman, who occupies one of those offices in the rear of the court house at Lexington, make a remark of Capt. James McClung somewhat to the following effect: I have never known the individual, who in my view lived so near to God and have so much of the image of his blessed Master as did Capt. James McClung. He would walk a long distance and attend for several days at a time upon the preaching of the Gospel when a revival of religion was going on. During the great revival of the Presbyterian church which took place some thirty odd years ago, Capt. McClung devoted himself to that revival, and aided much in its progress. It was known as "Jones" revival throughout the churches in this section of the Valley by its being gotten up and conducted mainly, so far as human aid was concerned, by a Presbyterian minister by the name of Jones. He would attend the meetings; walk from church to church while they lasted, and his gift in prayer was so devout, so eloquent that his prayers had a powerful effect upon the audience. Indeed the Rev. Mr. Jones would seek his assistance in that way to get up a religious feeling at his appointments and to keep it up when once aroused. Upon one occasion on being called out to lead in prayer, he commenced the utterance of his devotions in a secluded part of the church, and warming up as he proceeded, his prayer became so devout, so touching, that Mr. Jones came down from the pulpit and led him forth before the audience. The old man never ceased or faltered in his prayer, but grew more eloquent as he advanced, as though unconscious of any interruption, so much absorbed was he in his supplication before the throne of grace.

His Christian counsel was much sought for by those touched with an awakening sense of their sinfulness; by those experiencing doubts of their worthiness; by ministers even, and especially by young men preparing for the ministry. At one time the Rev. Wm. S. Plumer, meeting with him on the occasion of a religious service, sought an interview with him on the subject of his worthiness for the gospel ministry, and expressed his doubts of his acceptability. As I have heard the story, the two proceeded into the woods from the country church they were attending, and after consultation and prayerful consideration of the subject, the then young candidate felt much strengthened to persevere in his ministerial calling. I have heard it said to that conference it might be that the Presbyterian church was indebted for the subsequent able service of that distinguished divine. Dr. Plummer always expressed the highest admiration for the Christian character of old Capt. James McClung.

He was truly a pillar to the Presbyterian church and a shining light in the cause of Christianity during the long period of a well-spent life. No man could be so truly pious without, at the same time being a most useful and worthy citizen; but I have chosen to speak of him almost exclusively in his Christian character; and while I have exhausted the space I have hitherto allowed myself in such articles, have fallen short of exhausting the subject, for as much more could be written of the commendable virtues of Capt. McClung as a Christian man and yet the half not be told. Many years will have to elapse before the pious example of this unpretending holy man will cease to be felt in the sphere of his useful labors; and though meek and lowly was his lot on this earth, his crown of glory can but be bright in the realms above; while the memory of his Christian virtues shall remain as enduring and lasting as the lofty peaks which tower around his once humble home at the foot of South Mountain."

Capt. James McClung was a tall man with gray hair, gray eyes, heavy eyebrows, long, narrow and very white, smooth-shaven face, with beard under chin. He wore a blue homespun swallow-tail dress-coat. He was a party to the following transaction: "Know all men by these presents that I James McClung of the County of Rockbridge and State of Virginia have bargained and sold and delivered and by these presents do bargain sell and Confirm and deliver unto William McClung of the County of Wilkes and State of Georgia a Negro Woman Slave Named Charrity of the age of twenty one years with her child named Polly to have and to hold the said Negro Woman Slave and Child to him the said Wm. McClung his heirs or assigns from henceforth as his or their property absolutely without any manner of Condition in Witness whereof I herunto set my hand and seal this 19th Day of December 1798 Eight.

7-5 Phebe McClung, b. about 1816, d. Dec. 2, 1901, unm. Buried in the United Presbyterian cemetery at Timber Ridge, Va.

8-5 Samuel McClung, d. about 1865. He was killed by John Sayles near Buena Vista, Va. Samuel was a kind-hearted man, but was very fond of playing pranks. On one occasion he mounted a sleigh belonging to Mr. Moffett and invited Nathaniel Hill to take a ride with him. Hill innocently accepted the invitation. Moffet, missing his sleigh, went in search of it. Upon meeting Moffett in the road very unexpectedly, McClung unhitched the horse from the sleigh and fled, leaving Hill sitting in the sleigh only to discover that he had been made the victim of a practical joke.

Samuel's pranks were finally the cause of his death. He rode up to a shop near his own home, hitched his horse, and for sport mounted John Sayles' horse in the owner's presence and rode away. Sayles called upon him to stop. McClung pretended as if he did not hear; whereupon Sayles drew a revolver and shot him, killing him instantly. Two children, viz.:

8-3 John McClung, b. in Ireland, 1731; d. near Fairfield, Va., 1817. He was an Elder in the Timber Ridge Presbyterian Church. He was a remarkably stout and fine-looking man; very straight, six feet high and very portly, weighing 180 to 200 pounds. He was a successful farmer, possessing a considerable estate in land and slaves. He had a good English education and took a prominent part in the erection of schools and churches. m. 1754, Elizabeth Alexander, b. in Ireland, Oct. 28, 1735; d. prior to Nov. 29, 1802, dau. of Archibald Alexander and his wife, Margaret Parks, and aunt of Dr. Archibald Alexander, of Princeton. 2-4 Judge William McClung, b. near Fairfield, Va., July 12, 1758; d. near Maysville, Ky., 1811. Graduated from Liberty Hall Academy, now Washington and Lee University, Sep. 14, 1785. Studied law under Thomas Jefferson. Emigrated to Bardstown, Ky. He was a member of the Virginia Legislature from Kentucky; member of Kentucky Constitutional Convention, 1787, and of Kentucky Senate, 1796-1800. Judge of Mason Co., Ky. Circuit Court by appointment of Gov. Christopher Greenup, m. May 25, 1793, Susan Tarlton Marshall, b. at "Oakhill," Fauquier Co., Va., May 12, 1774; d. at Maysville, Ky., Nov. 5, 1858, dau. of Col. Thomas Marshall, and a sister of Chief Justice John Marshall, whose statue stands at the west entrance to the United States Capitol at Washington. It was while tolling his obsequies that the famous Liberty Bell was cracked. Seven children, viz.:

1-5 Thomas Marshall McClung, d. about 1820, unm.

2-5 Mary McClung, d. young.

3-5 Elizabeth McClung, d. young.

4-5 William McClung, Jr., d. young.

5-5 Charlotte J. McClung, b. 1803; d. 1840. Brilliant woman possessing many idiosyncrasies. m. 1828, Thomas H. Woolfolk, b. 1795; d. July 3, 1850.

6-5 Rev. John Alexander McClung, D.D., b. near Washington, Ky., Sep. 25, 1804; d. at Niagara Falls, Aug. 6, 1859. Educated at "Buckpond," by his uncle, Louis Marshall, and while there united with the Presbyterian Church. Entered Princeton College at the age of eighteen, but on account of ill health returned to Kentucky in 1824. In 1827 he was licensed to preach by Ebenezer Presbytery. Another account says he entered Princeton Theo. Sem. in 1823, graduated and was licensed in 1829. He preached several years in Washington, Ky.; became unsettled in his religious views; resigned his church and retired to his large farm in the Ohio bottom below Maysville, Ky., and engaged in literary pursuits until 1835. In 1830 he published a novel entitled "Camden, a tale of the South." In 1832 he published a volume entitled "Western Adventure," a book of thrilling interest which enjoyed a large sale. He contributed largely to Collins' first edition of the history of Kentucky, and was regarded as one of the most chaste and forcible writers of his day.

In 1835, after studying law in private he removed to Washington, Ky., and at once took a front rank at the bar. In 1838-9, he represented Mason County in the Kentucky Legislature.

During an evangelistic meeting in Maysville Feb. 23, 1849, he reunited with the Presbyterian Church and was again ordained to the ministry. He preached for several months to crowded houses in Louisville. He then accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church of Indianapolis, Ind., where he preached for several years. South Hanover College conferred upon him the degree of D.D. He was offered the presidency of that institution; but declined it on account of ill health. He went to St. Paul, Minn., where he preached until 1857. His health being improved he accepted a call to his former church at Maysville, Ky. But his former complaint, dyspepsia, returned in a more terrible form. He again went north for relief, announcing his purpose of trying a water-cure establishment. Passing through Cincinnati and Cleveland, he stopped at a hotel at Tonawanda, N. Y., on Aug. 5, 1859. On the next day it is supposed that he walked to Schlosser—a steamboat landing about nine miles distant, to bathe in the Niagara river; as he was said to be fond of bathing. His clothes were found on the dock, and four days later his lifeless body was found below the falls near the mouth of the Niagara river, in an eddy on the American side. The body was taken to Maysville, Ky., for interment. His tomb bears the following inscription:

"In memory of Rev. John A. McClung, D.D., late pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Maysville, Ky., born Sep. 25, 1804; d. Aug 6, 1859. How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod, Jer. xliii: 17. This monument is erected by members of the church and by friends of his youth and mature years, to whom he was endeared by every quality that can sanctify friendship and dignify and adorn manly character."

He was an eloquent speaker with a nervous, eccentric manner. He was a master in logic, appealing to the reason rather than to the emotions of his hearers. Being an exceedingly conscientious man, he possessed the unbounded confidence of all.

His biography has been ably written by Judge Henry Waller, of Chicago, and is published in the last edition of "Western Adventure," mentioned above. m. Nov. 25, 1825, Eliza Johnston, b. Feb. 9, 1806; d. at St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 28, 1860, sister of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, of C. S. A. Eight children, viz.:

1-6 John William McClung, b. Nov. 21, 1826; d. May 29, 1888. Educated at Center College, Danville, Ky., completing the junior year. Graduated in law at Transylvania University in 1847. Practiced law in Mason Co., Ky., 1848-1850. He went to Cincinnati, embarked in the wholesale grocery business, and lost all. Tried the commission business with no better success. In July, 1854, he moved to St. Paul, Minn. and resumed the practice of law. A year later he turned his attention to real estate. In 1869 he organized the first Building Association west of Ohio and for 17 years was secretary and business manager of the same. Forty or fifty of these institutions in the west have grown from the original; and he is regarded as the father of them all. He served as County Commissioner in 1860; City Assessor, 1864-1869; Editor-in-Chief of the "Pioneer" 1868-1870, and gained a reputation as a writer under the non de plume of "Merrimac." He published a volume entitled "Minnesota as it is in 1870." In 1871 he was elected a Director of the Chamber of Commerce. In 1872 he was Secretary of the St. Paul Board of Public Works; and in 1875, County Assessor. He inaugurated the system of public parks in St. Paul. He was one of the incorporators of the St. Paul Library Association. He wrote a memorial to Congress which secured $65,000 for the erection of Fort Snelling bridge.

He liberated all the slaves inherited from his father. In doing so he was carrying out the well-known wish of his father who during his own lifetime liberated the greater part of them; those he retained were the household servants. All of these were liberated by John William McClung at a time when he was $10,000 in debt, and the current rate of interest was 30 per cent. By selling the slaves he could have paid a large part of his indebtedness and was advised to do so by his friends; but he liberated the last slave and paid his indebtedness by what he believed to be a more honorable method. It took him twenty years to pay one hundred cents on the dollar, but he finally did so, and had a good balance left to his credit besides. At the time of his death he owned a large quantity of real estate and was esteemed one of St. Paul's wealthy men.

Personally he was a man of ordinary size, with a flowing beard, and a pleasant expression. He was modest and retiring in his nature; decided in his opinions; original and independent in his thinking and scrupulously honest in his conduct. He enjoyed universal respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. m. June 5, 1851, Mary Roberts Allen, b. at Natches, Miss., July 16, 1830. Address: St. Paul, Minn. Nine children, viz.:

7-5 Alexander Keith McClung, b. in Va. 1811; d. in Jackson, Miss., Mar. 23, 1855, unm. At the age of fourteen he attended a classical school conducted in Woodford, Co., Ky., by his uncle, Dr. Louis Marshall. To escape punishment he leaped from a second-story window and fled to his home in Mason County. Was commissioned as midshipman in the U. S. Navy April 1, 1828. He resigned his position in the navy August 20, 1829. Returned to Ky. and began a course in medical study but abandoned it and pursued the study of law. Emigrated in 1833 to Jackson, Miss., where he practiced law. He was an orator, statesman and soldier; but was noted chiefly as a duelist. His first duel was fought while cruising in the Mediteranean. His antagonist was also a midshipman, his senior by several years and a "dead shot." McClung was the challenger, his antagonist the aggressor. McClung knew his only chance of life was to allow his arm to receive the ball intended for his heart. He accordingly fired from his hip and allowed his arm to be broken.

His second duel was fought at the age of eighteen, near Frankfort, Ky. This time his antagonist was his cousin, James W. Marshall. The contest was not sought by McClung; Marshall was the challenger. McClung accepted, choosing pistols as the weapons, and ten paces as the distance. Marshall shot and missed. McClung reserved his fire, then fired into the air. Marshall desired another shot, but insisted that McClung should promise to return it. McClung was ready to give his antagonist another chance but would make no promise as to his own course. The seconds put a stop to further proceedings.

His third duel was fought at Jackson, Miss, with Gen. Allen, a very popular and influential young lawyer and politician. The cause of this difficulty was published at length by McClung in his own justification. The leading facts were about as follows: McClung had a quarrel with George W. Coffee, a violent and desperate character, of Jackson, Miss. Upon meeting Gen. Allen, a few days later, McClung confidentially told him all about it and at the same time used some very harsh language concerning Mr. Coffee. Gen. Allen violated this confidence by detailing the conversation to Mr. Coffee, obviously for the purpose of goading him to a contest. McClung reproached Gen. Allen for this breach of confidence. Allen resented by repairing to the state house and there in the presence of the bar and one hundred and fifty spectators, proclaiming McClung at the top of his voice as a coward, a liar and a scoundrel. McClung retorted this abuse with all the acrimony of which he was capable. An hour later Gen. Allen sent him a challenge and assumed the privilege of dictating the kind of weapons to be used. They were to meet that same evening on the bank of the Pearl river, in an eighty acre lot full of bushes. Each was to be armed with four pistols and a bowie-knife. They were to be stationed eighty yards apart. At the signal they were to advance, using their weapons at pleasure. If both survived the use of the pistols, the affair was to be finished with the knife. Gen. Allen dictated the use of these weapons evidently thinking that McClung would madly rush forward, speedily, exhaust his fire, and then be left at his mercy. But he grievously miscalculated upon the impetuosity of his antagonist. At the signal McClung advanced coolly and with the utmost deliberation, reserving his fire. When they had approached within thirty yards of each other Allen shouted: "Now, we will see who is the coward," and raised his pistol as he spoke. McClung replied: "Yes, we will;" and with the word sent a bullet through Allen's brain.

The fourth duel was with John Menifee. One evening they were bathing together in the Pearl River, when Menifee commenced dashing mud upon some boys, thus preventing them from dressing themselves. When this mischief had been carried to the point of persecution, McClung remonstrated with Menifee, which only made him all the more persistent. From words they came to blows and McClung, being the larger and stronger, gave his adversary a generous flogging. McClung bore him no malice and would willingly have become reconciled, but Menifee, the "game cock of Vicksburg," smarting under defeat, made such proclamations of hostile intentions as to render any reconciliation impossible to a man of McClung's temperament. The latter sought no collision, but would not yield an inch to fear. Some time later, Menifee, accompanied by George M. Coffee, who had more than once attempted McClung's life, found the latter in a billiard room unarmed and partially stupefied with drink; and while in this condition Menifee savagely assailed him with a billiard cue; striking him on the head from behind, and beating him with such force and violence as to fracture his skull. As McClung, stunned and helpless, was being led from the room, Menifee followed, and cursing, kicked him in contempt. Wiping the blood from his face, McClung turned and told him that he cared little for the blows with the billiard cue, which could not degrade him, but that for the insult and attempted humiliation of the kick, his life should pay the penalty; and that Menifee should hear from him as soon as he could stand upon his feet. McClung was now forced either to challenge and give Menifee the choice of a weapon with which the latter was an expert, or to become the aggressor in a street fight; which latter alternative he disdained to choose. As soon as he was able, he sent Menifee a peremptory challenge which the latter accepted; choosing yagers—a short rifle then much used in Mississippi, and with which he was a "dead shot." The distance was to be thirty yards; the beach of the Mississippi near Vicksburg, the place; Dec. 29, 1839, the time. No other idea entered the public mind than that McClung was to meet certain death. A large crowd collected upon the river bank to see him fall. The Vicksburg Rifles, of which Menifee was captain, turned out in uniform as if to a picnic, to witness the event. Calm, collected, unshaken and unchangable as fate itself, stood McClung amidst hundreds thirsting for his blood. Promptly at the signal, he fired. Menifee an instant later. Before the smoke had cleared away, Menifee was seen to totter, then to fall. An examination showed that he had received two wounds in the head. A cry of rage went up from his friends on the bank, to whom McClung bade defiance, as they seemed about to rush upon him.

A somewhat different account of these duels is furnished by the late John Henderson McClung, of Montezuma, Ga. The substance of his account is as follows:

"Alexander Keith McClung was one of the most remarkable men I ever knew. Six feet high and over; finely made; an eloquent orator and debator, brave to a fault. Had fought fourteen duels. Killed ten of the number. Was the most unhappy man, he said, in America, from those numerous killings. He gave me an account of them one night after midnight. I called at his hotel to see him. Found him lying on a couch with his tall, white beaver hat drawn down over his eyes, apparently asleep; which he said was not the case. I asked why he did not undress and go to bed. He said he could not sleep there at all; that in former years he had gotten into trouble with a family of desperadoes and had to kill them all out or be killed, since which time he had never had one day's peace of mind; and appealed to me as a young man never to fight a duel; that it took a much braver man to refuse than to fight; and gave me the following:

He said he had determined to emigrate to Jackson, Miss. and embark in his profession of the law. On his arrival there he found the profession over-run in numbers several hundred; consequently a bad prospect for a young beginner. The consequence was, in a few years he had spent all his patrimony in board and clothing, and in addition had got largely in debt for some expenses, which was running him crazy. At that stage, that grand man—the first lawyer of the South, S. S. Prentiss accosted him on the street and invited him to his office saying he wanted to see him on business. He there to his great astonishment and delight made a proposition for a partnership in their profession, saying he would guarantee him $7,000 per annum if he would stay in his office closely and do the office work and let him attend the courts without hindrance; that he (Prentiss) had lost from thirty to fifty thousand dollars at one court in New Orleans by not being able to get there. McClung told him there was some hindrance in the way, and that was debt and lack of suitable clothes to appear in. Prentiss told him to scout the city and get a full statement of all he owed and report to him and he would give him the money and wait with him till he could make it, which he did, and $500 in addition, saying for him to purchase a good outfit of clothing and pay a month's board in advance which just set him up for business. In a month or two Prentiss left for New Orleans to be gone three months. In a month after Prentiss departed, a large, tall, rough-looking customer named Menifee, originally from Rappahannock Co., Va.; then a large planter in the neighborhood of Jackson, put his head in at McClung's office door and inquired for Prentiss. McClung told him Prentiss was in New Orleans but that he, McClung was there to answer for him, supposing he was on law business. Menifee, who was a full-grown bully replied, saying that he could not answer to him; that he was determined to have a fight out of Prentiss or any man that would stand for him. McClung answered by saying that he could accommodate him in that. 'All right,' says Menifee, 'you will hear from me before the sun sets,' and left. Meniffee went around to the saloons boasting he would kill the Kentuckian, as he called McClung, whose friends became alarmed and congregated at his office telling him Meniffee was a perfect desperado, and killed every man he got into a difficulty with; that he had six brothers equally desperate; that if he killed one he would have to kill all or be killed. McClung replied that no man should abuse Prentiss as he had done in his office; that Prentiss had befriended him as no other man had ever done, and he would stand by him to the death. That afternoon Meniffee sent him a challenge. He accepted, naming the next morning at daylight at a dueling round five miles from the city and selecting Mississippi rifles at twenty paces. At the first fire Meniffee fell dead; the ball penetrating the forehead. The surgeon immediately probed for the ball, which when extracted was only half a ball. The crowd cried out fraud in loading. Two friends took McClung and placed him in their carriage and drove rapidly home to his office. In one or two hours his second arrived saying that the trouble was all over, that Meniffee's second had discovered by examining his rifle lock that the sharp edge in front of the hammer had split the ball, so that made peace or there would have been another duel between the seconds. Inside of a week he received a challenge from a brother of Meniffee, whom he killed; and so on till he had killed all seven. Then their kinsmen took it up. He fought seven of them killing three of the number and wounding the balance." His formidable reputation saved him from ever again being challenged.

He was a Lieut. Colonel in the Mexican War and at the battle of Monterey assumed the responsibility of hurling a company of volunteer riflemen against a fort which had just repulsed a whole division of regulars. Advancing in front of his men he shouted: "Tombigbee Volunteers, follow me." Scaling the battlements in advance of his men, he was in the act of receiving the Mexican General's sword from his hand when a minnie-ball shattered his thigh, and three fingers of his righthand were carried away by a volley of musketry. For his gallantry on this occasion he was presented with a handsome sword on which was inscribed the above order. This sword is in the possession of Mrs. Harrison T. McClung, of St. Paul, Minn.

Upon invitation, Col. McClung delivered an address before the Legislature of Mississippi in Jan., 1853, upon the life and character of Henry Clay. This address is printed in Lowry's History of Mississippi, and is regarded as a literary gem.

He was appointed Charge d' Affairs to Bolivia by President Taylor. He is said to have killed an overbearing Englishman in Bolivia, who spoke disrespectfully of Americans, but this is by others denied. The statement that he killed a man named Baker is also denied.

He once had a quarrel with a man named Johnson, of Jackson, Miss., which originated over McClung's picking over Johnson's fishing bait. They came to blows, clinched and fell together. Johnson, the larger man of the two, fell on top. The latter drew a bowie-knife and asked McClung, then completely at his mercy, "if you had me as I have you, what would you do to me?" McClung, looking up into the face of the angry man whose brandished knife was held over him, replied: "I would cut your d——d throat from ear to ear." Johnson replied: "I will be more generous than you would be," and immediately arose. The difficulty of course ended there. The two men became fast friends.

His collision with the gallant James S. Jackson had about it more laughable features. Jackson, conceiving that a remark of McClung's was designed as a sneer, struck him in the face with his open hand. Jackson was immediately knocked down and then badly beaten by his enraged adversary. Next morning with a beefsteak to his eye and surrounded by friends who consoled him for his bruises assuring him that McClung would certainly challenge him and take him across the river and shoot him, Johnson heard a quick step coming along the hall. The door was thrown open by a servant who announced Colonel McClung. Without looking at the others present, McClung walked straight to Jackson's bedside and extending his hand asked that the unpleasantness of the previous evening should be dismissed and forgotten, as all such petty brawls should be among gentlemen. Immensely relieved, Jackson sprang up in bed and grasping the outstretched hand, exclaimed: "those are my sentiments exactly."

McClung was dining at a hotel. He used his own knife to serve himself with butter. A strange guest said: "Waiter, come take this butter off the table. This man stuck his knife in it. McClung lifted the dish of butter and applied it to the man's face, and said: Waiter, Come take this butter off the table. This man stuck his nose in it. The strange guest became indignant, and handed his card to McClung in token of his challenge to a fight. McClung gave him his card in token of his acceptance of the challenge. When the stranger saw the name McClung on the card, he discovered that he had unwittingly challenged the famous duelist; and at once said to McClung: "Just let me have my card back; that is all I ask."

Once when the sheriff and his posse were held at bay

by an armed ruffian, McClung deliberately walked up to the desperado and took the pistol from his hand.

On another occasion he presumed upon his well-known character for courage by going late at night to the room of a young man who was his deadly enemy and knocking for admission. "Who is there?" came from within. "I am Alexander McClung." was the answer. "What do you want?" was sternly demanded. "I want to sleep with you," was the reply. The door was opened. Without a word of explanation they slept together, breakfasted side by side the next morning and appeared arm in arm on the street.

Alex. K. McClung was a little over six feet high, weighed about 170 pounds; was large boned and muscular, without an ounce of superfluous flesh. His forehead was high, square and prominent, with a lowering brow. His eyes were large and blue, seeming when excited to emit sparks of fire. His hair was sandy; complexion rather fair and florid; cheek bones high; jaws square and firmly set; walk rapid and step elastic.

Adherence to the false "code of honor" which prevailed in his day was deemed more essential than brains and moral character for one who sought political preferment. McClung possessed a temperament which made him an easy victim of this heathenish and barbarous code. His last days were spent in remorseful contemplation. He finally took his own life by blowing his brains out with a revolver. Some months before his death he penned the following lines overflowing with vocal and rhythmic liquidity. They constitute the melody of a despairing soul:

ODE TO DEATH.

Swiftly speed o'er the waves of time,
 Spirit of Death;
 In manhood's home, in youthful prime,
 I woo thy breath.
 For the fading hues of hope have fled,
 Like the Dolphin's light,
 And dark are the clouds above my head,
 As the starless night.
 Oh, vainly the voyager sighs for rest
 Of the peaceful haven,—
 The pilgrim saint for the home of the blest,
 And the calm of heaven;
 The galley slave for the night-wind's breath,
 At burning noon;
 But more gladly I'd spring to thy arms, O, Death
 Come soon, come soon!

It is sad indeed to see a young man of so much talent, of such fine attainments, of so noble a character cut down when he had but just entered the threshold of a useful and honorable professional life. As a student he was always found amongst the first of his class; as a physician he always won the confidence of those who knew his skill; as a Christian he was found ever consistent with his profession."

Va., with his brothers, James and William about 1742. m. Francis ———. The following note is in the possession of Frank Lee McClung, of Timber Ridge, Va., a descendant of James to whom it was originally given:

"We promise to pay to James McClung or his heirs executors administrators or assigns the just sum of four pounds ten shillings current and lawful money of Virginia on or before the ninth day of October next ensuing the date hereof, it being for value received of him the which payment well and truly to made we hereby do bind our selves our heirs Exrs and Admrs in the penal sum nine pounds ten shillings of the like lawful aforesaid in witness whereof we have set our hands and seals this the tenth day of October one thousand seven hundred and seventy-one,

HUGH McCLUNG, (Seal)

FRANCIS McCLUNG, (Seal)

Sealed and delivered in the presence of Wm. McClung."

Francis McClung (supposed to be the same as above) furnished the Virginia Militia two horses to aid in prosecuting the campaign against the Cherokee Indians about the year 1777.

Felix McConnell McClung, of Medina, Texas, traces his ancestry back to his grand-father, Hugh McClung, and his wife Francis, of Virginia. The similarity of names led to the supposition that his grand-parents and the persons signing the above note were identical. A closer inspection of dates, however, forbids this presumption. It is more probable that there were two Hughs; one the son of the other. In the absence of positive proof we proceed upon this assumption: Probably a son, viz:

The following church certificate now in the possession of William McClung Carlisle, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, who is a descendant of John McClung, is supposed to have been given to the latter upon his departure from Brookfield, Mass. for Pennsylvania in 1734.

"These are to certifie that John MacClung hath Lived Several years in this Town & has carryed Himself soberly & Christianly. That he has been received into full Communion & accordingly communicated with us and now at His Departure Stands in Church State free from any publick Scandal known to us and therefore Recommend Him as a person qualifeyed to Receive Church Privilidges where ever God in His Providence may cast His Lot.

As witness my Hand Brookfield November 24, 1734.

THOMAS CHENEY,

V. D. Min."

No state is mentioned in the certificate, however Temple's history of North Brookfield, Mass., contains a number of references to Rev. Thomas Cheney. It says he was born Jan. 29, 1688-9; ordained Oct. 16, 1717, and died in Brookfield, Dec. 11, 1747, after thirty years of pastoral service there, aged 59 years. This is confirmatory evidence that the above certificate was given at Brookfield, Mass. John McClung em-

4-3 William McClung, b. Oct. 25, 1746; d. about July 28, 1779. He was killed by the Indians in a massacre at Fort Freeland, near Millerstown, Pa. He fled from his pursuers and ran so swiftly that he would have made his escape but for an Indian lying in ambush who sprang out and struck him with a tomahawk. Mrs. Elizabeth J. Carlisle, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, gives the following account of the massacre:

"William McClung and others were holding the fort waiting for reenforcements, but were attacked and compelled to surrender. The Indians agreed to let the old men, women and children go free; but the young men were taken prisoners and put into a field near the fort, with a guard around them. When reenforcements came they thought they could re-take the fort, and so fired on the British and Indians. In the confusion, McClung went to their captain, whose name was John Litel, and said: 'We can make our escape now.' Litel replied: 'You can; I will not try; for if they fail to whip the British and Indians, I hold the papers of agreement. If I should go with these papers, the Indians would kill every woman and child.' McClung and a comrade started to run, but the latter soon hid in a bush and was saved. McClung passed on with great speed and succeeded in distancing his pursuers, when suddenly he was attacked by an Indian in ambush, and was killed. Litel was taken prisoner, but after he reached home he said he saw McClung's scalp and knew it by the gray hairs." It was said the Indian held the scalp in his hand and commented on the marvelous speed of his victim. William McClung m. Jean Leach. Three children, viz.:

THE GREENBRIAR McCLUNGS.

About the time James, William and Hugh McClung emigrated to Virginia, there came also a John McClung, who is said to have been a cousin of those above mentioned. The name of his father is unknown; but it is quite probable that it was also John McClung, one of the three original brothers who fled from Scotland to Ireland. There is nothing to forbid this assumption, and the meager traditions seem to point in that direction.

1-2 JOHN McCLUNG, b. probably in Ireland, d. about 1788, in Rockbridge Co., Va., at an advanced age. He emigrated from Ireland to Penna.; thence to Rockbridge Co., Va. He was a farmer and owned 278 acres of land in Rockbridge Co., Va., in what was known as the "Forks." He sold this farm to his son Edward on Apr. 23, 1783. When he sold his farm a neighbor asked him what he proposed to do now. He replied in a jocular manner: "I propose to live like a gentleman and have all the whiskey I want to drink." Even ministers of the gospel drank whiskey freely in those days. He owned a still-house valued at £100. He m. Rebecca Stuart who was related to Hon. Alexander Hugh Holmes Stuart, of Staunton, Va., who was Secretary of State in President Franklin Pierce's Cabinet. John McClung survived his wife several years, and resided with his daughter, Nancy Moore during the latter years of his life. He suffered with a cancer on his face. After his death, his son Joseph entered suit in the Chancery Court of Rockbridge Co., to recover the farm his father had sold to Edward McClung; alleging that by reason of age and mental infirmity, his father was incompetent to transact such business. The estate was in litigation for ten or twelve years; and from these Chancery Court records the names of John McClung's children and grand-children were obtained. An inventory of the personal estate of John McClung deceased was made June 7, 1791; the estate being valued at £3. 16 shillings.

Seven of his sons settled in Greenbriar Co., W. Va. Their descendants are very numerous in that county, hence this branch of the family is designated as "Greenbriar McClungs." It is said that during the Civil War, two companies—the "Greenbriar Swifts" and the "Nicholas Grays," contained thirty-two McClungs. They rode the finest horses in Gen. Robert E. Lee's army. Alpheus Paris McClung was captain of the "Greenbriar Swifts."

In the vicinity of Mt. Lookout, W. Va., there is a community known as the "McClung Settlement." The writer visited this community in the summer of 1902. Before reaching the Carnifex Ferry, he inquired of a citizen how far one must travel after crossing the ferry before he should reach the McClung settlement." He replied: "The first house you come to after crossing the ferry belongs to a McClung; and the next is a McClung; and the next is a McClung; and from there on it is just McClung—Clung—Clung—Cling—a—ty—Clung—Clung—Clung." It was found to be verily so. They are a peaceful, law-abiding, hospitable people. A worthy gentleman asserts that he has lived among these McClungs for eight years and he has never yet heard a profane oath uttered by one of the name.

This branch of the family is so numerous and the names are so similar that it has become necessary to make use of a sobriquet in order to distinguish between them. John McClung and Rebecca Stuart had ten children, viz.:

1-3 Thomas McClung, d. probably Oct. 10, 1774, as he was said to have been killed at the battle of Point Pleasant. m. Nancy Black. They lived in Greenbriar Co., W. Va. Six children, viz.:

Three months later he volunteered and was assigned to Capt. Burkhart's cavalry, Company K, 14th Va. Reg. In Oct., 1864, he was transferred to Hounshell's Battalion as drillmaster, in which capacity he served till the close of the war. He was several times wounded; twice severely. He was slightly wounded in an engagement in Greenbriar Co., W. Va. He was severely wounded in the left breast at Frederick City, Md. He was wounded in the right side in front of the block house in Washington City, while attempting to carry his wounded brother John off the field. He was wounded in the face at the battle of Ninevah. He was captured at Ninevah, but made his escape by riding through the Federal lines, swimming the Shenandoah river three times, and taking refuge in the mountains. He reached his command the next evening.

He began the practice of medicine about the year 1868, and has succeeded in building up an enormous practice. He is one of the most popular practitioners in his county. He served as Deputy Sheriff four years 1882-1886. He was President of the Board of Regents for the Deaf, Dumb and Blind School at Romney, W. Va., for twelve years. He is a large land owner, having between 2,500 and 3,000 acres of coal, timber and grazing land. He grazes about 300 head of cattle each year. In politics he is a Democrat; and in ecclesiastical affairs is actively identified with the M. E. Church South. He has a beautiful home near Meadow Bluff, W. Va. m. 2-3 Joseph McClung, (Sinking Creek Joe). d. The following anecdote is told of him: A hog-thief once stole some hogs from Joseph McClung. The thief was arrested, convicted, and consigned to the whipping post. At the time appointed for the execution of the sentence, Joseph was present to see it well and adequately done. When the sheriff had finished applying the lash, Joseph, thinking the punishment insufficient rushed up and grabbing the lash fairly blistered the prisoner with a few additional strokes. The prisoner afterward prosecuted him for this act and made it cost him the worth of a horse. Joseph again sought retaliation. Some time afterward a Baptist revival was conducted in the neighborhood and this same hog-thief was numbered among the converts. When the day arrived for the immersion of this convert in the creek, Joseph McClung was present as a mere spectator. Just as the converted hog-thief emerged from the water, Joseph rushed up to the edge of the stream and cried out: "Will the hair come? If it won't, dip him again." This last act cost him the worth of another horse; but he seems to have had more horses than hogs to spare.

He lived on Sinking Creek in Greenbriar Co., W. Va., in one of the finest agricultural regions in the state. He came to Greenbriar from Rockbridge Co., Va. The exact date of his emigration to Greenbriar is unknown; but it was certainly not later than 1776.

His abhorrence of the papacy is evinced by the following retraction which appeared in the W. Va. Historical Magazine:

"Whereas, We Joseph McClung and Samuel McClung having heard by sundry unadvised persons that Mr. Andrew Donnally was a Papist and that he had changed his name by omiting an O which should have been prefixed to his Sirname, and whereas, we have unadvisedly published the same and also in an Advertisment which he set up in March, 1775 to warn the inhabitants of Greenbriar to give in a list of their tithables, did prefix the said O to his Sirname; and as we have since by unquestionable evidence been convinced that there is no just foundation for the same, we hereby acknowledge ourselves heartily sorry for the same; and in witness whereof, have subscribed this and allow the same to be transmitted to Record.

Given under our hands and seals this fourth day of March 1776.

Uncle Sam and big Jim McCoy went out hunting. Did not kill anything. Came back about dark. Anthony Callison and another bow of one of the girls was there and went to the spring-house with them. Their spring-house was at the 'Long Billy' spring. Sam and Jim shot off their guns. They thought it was Indians. He forgot Abby. They left the girls, run up through the mountains where Dave Humes lives; did not get back until next day about dark, with clothes nearly torn off them. Their limbs were mighty scratched. People courted barefoot in them days."

3-3 William McClung, (Grandfather Billie) b. about 1738; d. Jan. 18, 1833, "aged about 95 years." In 1773 he emigrated with his wife and three children from Rockbridge Co., Va., to the mouth of Big Clear Creek, near Rupert, W. Va. On account of the Indians he soon moved to near Williamsburg, W. Va., where he resided three years, returning to Big Clear Creek about 1776. He was the first settler on Meadow River. He took a tomahawk entry for 100,000 acres of land on that river and its tributaries. When he first reared his cabin, there was not a store or mill within one hundred miles of his lonely habitation. The Indians were so troublesome that he plowed with his rifle tied to his shoulder, while his wife with her musket and three little children, took refuge in the dense swamp during the day, returning to the cabin only at night when he was there to defend them.

In partnership with Gen. Andrew Moore and Alexander Welch, he patented a tract of land containing 43,000 acres lying between the Meadow river and the Gauley, in what is now Nicholas Co., W. Va. His descendants are very numerous in Greenbriar and Nicholas Counties. During his lifetime he frequently remarked that he could stand on his doorstep, blow his bugle and call two hundred of his descendants to breakfast. In his old age he used to give hundred-acre tracts of land to his grandchildren for birthday presents.

He was very tall and handsome in appearance, a good conversationalist and a most estimable citizen. He was a Presbyterian and donated two acres of land on Otter Creek, one mile west of Meadow Bluff, for the erection of a church. The church ultimately came into the possession of the Baptists; the Amwell Baptist Church near Rupert being the outgrowth.

Preparations are being made by his descendants and friends to erect a monument to his memory. His remains lie buried in the Otter Creek cemetery, one mile west of Meadow Bluff, W. Va. He m. Abigail Dickson, d. Nov. 7, 1820, "age 74 years." Eleven children, viz.:

- 1-5 Samuel McClung, (Devil Sam) b. June 6, 1799; d. July 27, 1888. He was a very large man with broad shoulders, and a massive chest and lungs. He always wore a large, loose hunting shirt and moccasins. He was undoubtedly the greatest practical joker in Greenbriar County; hence he received the soubriquet "Devil Sam."

Just after the Civil War, when Dr. William H. McClung began the practice of medicine, "Devil Sam" sent a servant for the young doctor at breakneck speed. The doctor returned with the servant in great haste. Dismounting from his horse he hastened to the bedside of the patient and found him tossing upon his bed, moaning and groaning, apparently suffering the agonies of death. The doctor hurriedly examined the pulse, tongue, heart and lungs. Failing to locate the cause of the pain, he again made a more careful and thorough examination. Finally he addressed the patient somewhat as follows: Mr. McClung, I have made quite a careful and thorough diagnosis. The tongue looks all right, the pulse and temperature are normal, and I must confess I fail to discover any indications of an abnormal state of health. "Devil Sam" then confessed that there was nothing whatever the matter with him. Said he: "I only wanted to see if you had sense enough to tell a well man from a sick one when you saw him." Dr. McClung played his part of the joke by charging him fifteen dollars for the visit and collecting the bill.

On another occasion "Devil Sam" was seen going toward his home on horseback as fast as his horse could carry him. He carried in his hand a large hat box which he held at arm's length. A neighbor, wishing to converse with him, called to him to stop. He replied: "No time now, can't stop," and spurred his horse on with all his might. "What's the matter; is somebody sick or dying?" asked the neighbor. "No," said Devil Sam, "I've got a new hat for my wife, and I've got to get it home to her before the fashion changes."

He once told one of his friends that a few days before, he had wrung an owl's head off without touching it. His skeptical friend asked for an explanation of how he did it. He replied: "I was in the timber hunting. I saw a hoot-owl sitting on the limb of a tree. I walked around the tree and that owl just kept his eyes fastened on me all the time. The third time I went around the tree, that owl's head dropped off on the ground." Let it be understood just here that my informant disclaims any responsibility for "Devil Sam's" veracity.

Once while on a hunting expedition, he camped in the mountains at night, in company with several men, among others, the Rev. Adam Given. They made their beds by gathering an armful of mountain ferns and spreading them upon the ground. "Devil Sam" had the best bed of the lot. A wave of generosity swept over his soul, and he offered to exchange beds with the parson. His generosity was accepted, and the exchange was made. About an hour later, "Devil Sam," apparently uneasy and discontented, got up, and going over to the parson demanded his own bed. When asked for an explanation of his discontent he said: "Parson, I'm afraid to sleep in your bed, because if old Satan should come after you to-night and find me in your bed, I'm afraid he would make a mistake and take the wrong man."

On another occasion "Devil Sam" was hunting all alone in the mountain. He lodged at night in a deserted cabin far from any human habitation. During the night he was seized with a severe attack of the colic. Thinking he would surely die before morning, and fearing his family would never know the cause of his death, he crawled to the fire-place and taking a piece of charcoal from the ashes, wrote on the wall of the cabin this fateful epitaph: "I died with the colic—Devil Sam." Although he survived, this epitaph remained on the wall for months, and was read by many a hunter who passed that way.

When "Devil Sam" was lying on his death-bed at his home some years later, a minister of the gospel visited him. After a few introductory words, the minister said: "Well, brother McClung, have you made preparation for death?" He replied: "Yes, I had the boys repair the road to the grave-yard just the other day." He m. Jane Kincaid, b. June, 1798; d. Aug. 10, 1847. Dawson, W. Va. Seven children, viz.:

THE QUAKER McCLUNGS.

1-1 THOMAS McCLUN,

B. in Scotland or Ireland about 1690; d. m. 6 mo. 19, 1714, Elizabeth Hainan. They were both of Rathfryland, County Down, Ireland, and were married at the house of Robert Wilson. They were members of the Society of Friends. He dropped the final letter "g" from his name in order to distinguish it from that of a neighbor named McClurg. He afterward expressed regret for having mutilated the name, and advised his children to restore the letter to their name upon attaining their majority. Some of his descendants did so, while others omit the letter to this day. Thomas and wife moved from Rathfryland to Moate, County West Meath, Ireland; thence to Pennsylvania, U. S. A. They were granted a certificate of dismission from Moate Monthly Meeting dated 3 mo. 11, 1729; the same was received by New Garden Monthly Meeting 5 mo. 29, 1729, Thomas McClun and family are reported 6 mo. 30, 1729, as being settled within the limits of Concord Monthly Meeting to which a certificate was signed 1 mo. 28, 1730. Concordville, Delaware Co., Pa. How many children they had is unknown, but the names of at least three are on record, viz.:

1-2 SARAH McCLUNG, m. Jan. 7, 1741-2, Robert Miller. Their marriage was recorded by New Garden Monthly Meeting near Christiana, Pa. She is supposed to be a daughter of Thomas McClun above mentioned. No proof of it except the fact that her marriage appears on the Friends records.

2-2 THOMAS McCLUN, b. May 8, 1730; d. Oct. 21, 1804. Removed from Chester Co., Pa., to near Winchester, Va., about 1754. Was a farmer and carpenter; m. Nov. 12, 1761, Hannah Perkins, b. Sep., 1740; d. May 27, 1812, dau. of Isaac and Mary Perkins. Hannah was the eleventh of fourteen children. Thomas McClun was a member of the Society of Friends.

The following minute of Hopewell Meeting, Frederick Co., Va., is on record, Mar. 26, 1759: "Thomas McClun produced a paper to this meeting condemning his proceedings in hiring a man in his room to go out a scouting against the Indian enemie, also appearing in the field to muster, all which he now condemns to the satisfaction of this meeting and this meeting orders James Wright to read the said paper at the close of a first days meeting and return it to the clerk to be recorded."

Oct. 5, 1761, "Thomas McClun was allowed £12 more than his former bargain for building the Hopewell meeting house, which augments the sum to £55-10s.-0d."

"The friends appointed to see the orderly accomplishment of the Thomas McClun's and Hannah Perkins' marriage report the same was decently accomplished."

"Oct. 7, 1771. This meeting appoints Thomas McClun Overseer in the room of Joseph Lupton until further orders." Thirteen children, viz.:

1-3 Nathan McClun, b. Aug. 11, 1762; d. Oct. 26, 1762.

2-3 Mary McClun, b. Jan. 26, 1764; m. between July 2, and Sep. 3, 1798, William Beal. She produced a certificate June 2, 1798, from Crooked Run to Hopewell meeting.

3-3 Elizabeth McClun, b. Jan. 18, 1766; m. Mr. Mahoney.

4-3 Isaac McClun, b. Oct. 13, 1767.

5-3 John McClun, b. Jan. 29, 1769; d. May 5, 1826, in Columbiana Co., Ohio. He was a farmer and tanner. Moved from Hillsboro, Va., to Washingtonville, O., in 1804. m. June 1, 1797, at Fairfax Meeting, Elizabeth Beal, b. Oct. 28, 1776; d. Aug. 18, 1813, dau. of Joseph Beal, b. Oct. 14, 1747; d. June 8, 1824, and his wife, Hannah Russell, b. Aug. 2, 1750, d. June 12, 1832, of Fairfax, Va. John and Elizabeth received the following church certificate:

"To Middleton Monthly Meeting, Dear Friends: The occasion of our writing to you at this time is on account of John McClun and Elizabeth, his wife, who hath requested our certificate in order to be joined to your meeting. These therefore certify on their behalf that enquiry being duly made we do not find but that their lives and conversation hath been in a good degree orderly, frequenters of our religious meetings, and hath settled their outward affairs to satisfaction as far as appears as members of our society we recommend them with their four children all in their minority, namely: Joseph Beal, Cynthia, Hannah and Rachel, to your Christian care and oversight, desiring their growth in the truth, and subscribe ourselves your friends.
